Old Nani-lei lives in Hana-lani, her family home in rural Hawaii. She looks after her grandson Henry, 52, and his daughter Lucy, 6, who have returned to Maui from Berkeley after the death of Maria, Henry's wife. Henry and Maria, both professors, had been working on A History of Ethics, and now the grieving Henry struggles to finish it.

City girl Meredith Campbell, 36, fast-paced, self-centered, and beautiful, believes her body will ensure her happiness. After losing her job and finding her lover unfaithful, she flies to Maui, sure he will follow...but her plane crashes near Hana-lani.

As their worlds collide in a natural world both beautiful and dangerous, Henry will be forced to act on his words, and Meredith will come face-to-face with her own life choices.

CHRISTINE SUNDERLAND, author of the trilogy, Pilgrimage, Offerings, and Inheritance, has long been interested in the formation of cultural ideals in American society, and the role of history and tradition in the public square. In her visits to Hawaii she has appreciated the respect for faith and family she has found there, as well as the stunning natural world, both beautiful and dangerous.

She is Church Schools Director for the Anglican Province of Christ the King and Vice-President of the American Church Union (Anglicanpck.org). She has edited The American Church Union Church School Series, The Anglican Confirmation Manual, and Summer Lessons and authored Teaching the Church's Children and seven children's novellas, the Jeanette Series (American Church Union).
